

Damned If You Dont: A Catskill Mountain Mystery

Raised in the Sixties on picket lines and peace marches, activist Hannah Fox cant turn her back when a friends land is targeted by an eminent domain scam that threatens her small town in the Catskill Mountains of upstate New York. When the developer behind the fraudulent scheme is murdered and her young friend becomes a suspect, Hannah probes the dead mans shameful past. She faces hard choices, convinced the murder was a heroic act even when its clear she may be the killers next victim. When Hannah volunteers at a domestic abuse hotline and tries to help the women and children whose lives become entwined with her own, shes caught in the towns secrets, lies, and double dealing. Trouble invades her private life as she tries to curb the mounting attraction between herself and Jack Grundy, Senior Investigator for the New York State Police, while watching her own marriage crumble.
